

Statements of Teaching Philosophy by 2014 Recipients

William Arnold
Seaver College

Kristine Knaplund
School of Law

David Levy
Graduate school of Education and Psychology

Gary Selby
Seaver College

Cynthia Coburn
Seaver College

Bernice Ledbetter
Graziadio School of Business and Management

James Prieger

Gary Selby

Professor of Communication

Seaver College

In his essay, Meditation in a Toolshed, C. S. Lewis describes its roof, through which a beam of sunlight experiences of viewing the beam
b

¹ He notes on the difference between sunlight that can be seen from the outside and beam

Kristine Knaplund
Professor of Law
Pepperdine School of Law

Howard White Award For Teaching Excellence, 2014

Thank you for selecting me for the Howard White Award. I appreciate the wonderful support I have received from Dean, the law school administration, and all my colleagues in helping me

David Levy
Professor of Psychology
Graziadio School of Education and Psychology

The mediocre teacher tells.
The good teacher explains.
The superior teacher demonstrates.
The great teacher inspires.

-William Ward

I cannot teach anybody anything, I can only make them think.

-Socrates

When I reflect on the truly special teachers throughout the world, I am struck by the fact that they are not just good teachers, they are great teachers. They are the ones who have made a difference in the lives of their students. They are the ones who have inspired them to reach for their dreams. They are the ones who have shown them that they are capable of more than they thought they were. They are the ones who have made a difference in the world.

thinking the best of ourselves. The Dunning-Kruger effect refers to our tendency to cling to our inflated sense of perseverance effect, which is often based on a lack of clearly disconfirming evidence. Although there are many ways to teach this critical thinking principle, I have found over the years that this anecdote and many others like it are by far the most effective and have more impact and staying power than nearly every other teaching method available. Satirical pieces, which use humor as a means of shedding light on a wide range of behaviors,